

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides for improved methods of transplanting insulin-producing cells for the treatment of diabetes. The methods involve the manipulation of endothelial cell quantity and quality in the transplanted material, arising from the inventor's discovery that donor 5 endothelial cells contribute to the revascularization of grafted material.